President Reagan and the CIA subsequently canceled the program of support for the counterterrorists. In a speech Monday, Mr. Reagan linked Iran, Libya, North Korea, Onba and Nicaragus as mem-

Panel's Report Card: Japan Schools Need Reform

By Clyde Haberman New York Times Service TOKYO — Nearly a year ago, Japan's prime minister appointed a ission to reassess a national school system that he had de-scribed repeatedly as outmoded, uncreative, rigid and inhibiting. Now the 25-member panel has reported back, with a conclusion that the system is every bit as bad as Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone said it was. In fact, the Ad Hoc Advisory Council on Education seemed to suggest, it may well

"Despite its merit," the panel said, "the main thrust of this country's education has been to have students memorize information and facts. The development of the ability to think and judge on one's own and the development of cre-ativity has been hampered. Too many stereoryped persons without marked individuality have been produced. Some people lack identity as Japanese."

The report surprised almost no one when it was issued recently. For one thing, most people expected a reaffirmation of Mr. Nakasone's basic position since he had selected the panel members. For up in the South China Sea, the office of the UN High Commissioner for Refugees said Friday.

Engines Shut; Shuttle Launch Aborted

CAPE CANAVERAL, Florida (AP) - The engines on the space shuttle Challenger ignited, then shut down three seconds before its scheduled liftoff Friday. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration launch control said the ship and crew were safe.

"We don't know what the anomaly was." Jim Ball, of the launch control staff, said. The seven-day mission was carrying $72 million worth of scientific instruments, including a West German-built system to point sensitive equipment in astronomical experiments with occuracy never achieved before.

It was not known immediately whether all three of the shuttle's engines, which are fired 120 milliseconds apart, had ignited. The ship's two big solid rocket boosters did not ignite. It was the second time in 19 annehes that a shuttle liftoff had been stopped after the engines were gnited. The first time was on June 26, 1984, when the maiden launch of the shuttle Discovery was aborted four seconds before liftoff.

Bonn said Thursday it had impounded thousands of bottles in a hunt for wine mixed with an anti-freeze chemical for taste and strength. The spokesman said the Austrian leader assured Mr. Kohl by telephone and letter that all exported wine had undergone special checks since April when it was learned that some had been mixed with diethylene glycoi which can cause paralysis.

In the Netherlands, the government advised anyone who drank at least half a bottle of Austrian wine this week to consult a doctor.

marching through a sensitive Ro-man Catholic district known as "The Tunnel." More than 600 police, backed by soldiers, came under repeated barrages of rocks, bricks and bottles as they guarded either end of the Obins Street neighborhood, where about 70 Catholic families live. Police fired plastic bullets to disperse gangs of Protestant youths. At least three policemen were injured in the clashes, and two persons were arrested.

Fighting flared in about 20 cities and towns earlier in the day.

Numerous celebrations organized by the fiercely pro-British Orange Order are held throughout Northern Ireland in July, chimax with the big Orange Day parades July 12.

Catholics, outnumbered 2-1 by Protestants, have long complained that the parades are provocative and there is growing sentiment in British and Irish government circles to curb them.

But in London, Lord Fitt, a leading moderate Catholic, argued in the House of Lords on Friday against rerouting or banning the Orange Order marches.

"Every terrible crisis we have seen or witnessed over these past 21 years has been preceded by demonstrations or banning of some description," said Lord Fitt, a former. member of the House of Commons

Reagan Shift On Budget Riles Senate Republicans

By Helen Dewar Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON - Republicans in the U.S. Senate are complaining that President Ronald Reagan has abandoned a major weapon in the fight against soaring budget deficits by changing his mind on freezing Social Security

Mr. Reagan and congressional leaders reached an agreement earlier this week to try to write a deficitreduction plan that provides inflation increases for both the military and Social Security, without any The criticism by Senate Republicans was especially strong during a closed-door session during which many of the 22 Republicans who are up for re-election next year vented their anger to party leaders and White House officials. The senators object to a "framework" agreement reached Wednesday between the White House and congressional budget negotiators in an effort to settle differences on the key issues of taxes, military spending and Social Security, which pro-vides for retirement benefits and disability payments.

"People feel they flew a kamika-ze mission and ended up in flames and got nothing for it," said Sena-tor Warren Rudman, Republican of New Hampshire.
"If the president can't support ns," added Sen. Charles E. Grass-ley, Republican of Iowa, "he ought to keep his mouth shut." Senator Robert J. Dole, Republican of Kansas and the Senate ma-jority leader, said, "A lot of sena-tors are pretty upset about what they perceive to be a House-White House combine." Pete V. Domenici, Republican of New Mexico and the Budget Com-mittee chairman, said, "There's a lot of negative comment among senators about what happened, with a great deal of justification, that's for sure."

Senate negotiators are demanding equivalent cuts in other domes tic programs to offset the loss of savings from Social Security; House bargainers say they will pro-pose additional cuts but are resisting the demand for equivalent savings, which would amount to about $28 billion over three years.

Mr. Domenici called for a firstyear reduction of $6 billion to $8 billion toward the $28 billion, but the House Budget Committee chairman, William H. Gray 3d. Demosrat of Pennsylvania, said that only $3 billion to $6 billion was possible.

A Chance to Stand Firm

President Ronald Reagan is backing out of the salcon with his rhetorical guns blazing, but the fireworks cannot hide the fact that he is backing away from dealing with airline safety just when he should be standing firm.

There is every reason for dignified anger. An American sailor was beaten and murdered aboard the hijacked TWA plane last month and his murderers are at liberty near Beirut. Four other Shiite hijackers who killed two Americans aboard a Kuwaiti airliner last December were ostentatiously seized by authorities in Iran but were never tried or extradited. Besides the 39 Americans who were held hostage in Lebanon, seven kidnapped Americans have been held there for up to 16 months. Yet instead of mobilizing opinion and action to deal with these offenses, Mr. Reagan confuses the subject by inveighing broadly against "a confederation of terrorist states."

You do not have to deny U.S. grievances against Cuba, Nicaragua, North Korea and Libya to see that their governments, although sometimes allied, each present different challenges that are also distinct from those of Iran, Lebanon and Syria. Nor need you deny their attacks on America to preserve distinctions that Mr. Reagan blurs: between terrorism and civil war, guerrilla war and aggression.

If Cuba is to be indicted for encouraging terror against the United States, it needs at least to be remembered that the United States sponsored an invasion of Cuba and many plots to assassinate its leader. If Nicaragua is guilty of terror against its neighbors and deserves, in Mr. Reagan's words, "the full weight of the law," why has he refused the invitation to make that case before the World Court? And if Libya's indisputable outrages against many nations so deeply perturb the United States, where is the campaign to close its gun-laden embassies or to boycott its oil-drum war chest? The sad truth is that instead of exploiting the universal interest in airline safety and hijacking, Mr. Reagan has yielded to allied and Arab protests, quietly softened his sanc-tions against the Beirut airport and loudly tried to change the subject.

All violence is deplorable; all terrorism is unacceptable. But all offenders do not have a single inspiration, and all offenses do not have a single remedy. Six hijacker-murderers of Americans are at large, many airports are lax on security and many governments are insuffi-ciently aroused by hijackings to erect an effective defense. These problems should transcend most nations' politics. What a chance to satisfy Mr. Reagan's desire for collective and unilateral action, justified in law.

Hijacking and harboring hijackers are out-lawed by international air conventions. Nations that shelter hijackers disqualify themselves for air traffic. Governments that let their planes fly to such nations subvert agree-ments they solemnly signed, and put all travel-ers at risk. As Mr. Reagan proved with Greece, one word from the White House that a nation's airport or policy jeopardizes travelers and it will soon feel the economic sting.

An America that wants hijacking resisted has a rare chance to separate air travel from all other political calculations, Mr. Reagan now has a chance to be smartly tough.

Bishop Tutu to the Rescue

It was an extraordinary scene, even for South Africa: an angry black crowd sensing betrayal, a car turned upside down and set afire, and Bishop Desmond Tutu, in purple clerical robes, moving through the people to wave them away from a gasoline-doused black man who, were it not for the bishop's intervention, would surely now be dead.

The crowd in Duduza accused its victim of being a police informant. For this he would be dealt with as have been many township coun-cillors, deputy mayors and the like: backed to death or set afire - fates seen as fit punishment for turning against one's own. In tele-vised film you could see Bishop Tutu and Bishop Simeon Nkoane moving in the crowd, gesturing orgently without laying on a hand.

This undermines the struggle, Bishop Tutu cried, acting out his philosophy of nonviolent resistance at extraordinary personal risk.

This is the same Bishop Tutu who, three years ago, confronted a large, white policeman beating an elderly black man with a stick and held a cross aloft until the beating stopped. In 1981, when a black crowd at a funeral attacked a suspected police informant, Bishop Tutu flung himself across the victim, persuaded the attackers to back off and gave a service wearing clerical robes soaked with the man's blood. More than 400 blacks have been killed in political violence in South Africa in the past 10 months. A few days ago it was the police who committed the violence, in Kwathema. Witnesses said the police fired tear gas and rubber bullets indiscriminately into a movie house where frightened mourners had fled from po-lice after an all-night service for still other black youths killed in a hand-grenade explosion weeks before. Seven died.

Violence against blacks, whoever commits is the infection of apartheid. "Many in the black community, incensed at the injustice of apartheid, believe that anyone who collaborates in [the] apartheid system is a co-oppressor," Bishop Tutu said after the Duduza attack. "You will recall that collaborators were dealt with very, very harshly, with summary justice, during World War II in the resistance

. This is not to condone what is done to them, but it is to say that it is a phenomenon that is universal. And our own effort, as the church, is to try and say any form of violence is unacceptable and will not in the end solve the problems of our country amicably. What might do that is, of course, the example of Bishop Tutu's nobility of spirit and a decision by the current white rulers to reach out to people like him who have the capacity to save South Africa.

Other Opinion

Some Americans Will Stay Put

"So you weren't hijacked." After my wife and I returned recently from a 10-day vacation in Spain, we soon lost count of the people who gave us that greeting. The hijackers of the flight out of Athens seem to have done more damage to the American psyche than they could have expected. They may well have dealt the travel industry serious injury.

Americans want to believe that a trip to another continent is no more dangerous than an evening in an expensive restaurant. The travel industry carefully nurtures that belief. Go overseas and a guide will meet your tour party in the airport, leaving you only as you pass through security and prepare to board your plane home. The airlines advertise competent crews who fly statistically safe jumbo iets around turbulence instead of through it.

In reality, travel has always been a dangerous enterprise. Chaucer's Canterbury pilgrims banded together to repel highwaymen. Centuries of pirate forays caused the great Mediterranean powers to invent the naval convoy. My ancestors went west in groups and carried loaded guns. The uniquely civilized aspect of ancient Hebraic culture was its protection of strangers within the city gates. The media will now move to other stories, to new horrors and disasters with which to excite viewers and readers. The public will forget the details of the TWA hijacking. But a haunting memory will remain as a lesson that the innocent wayfarer is forever prey to the determined brigand. Remembering, a lot of people will stay in their own country. That is a huge favor to those of us who intend to continue traveling. H.H. Morris in the Baltimore Evening Sun.

Television Did Well to Inform bad. Now I hear that television has become the terrorists' ultimate tool. This is a daffy and irresponsible charge. The competitive zeal with which the networks chased after the story of the hostages should be celebrated as an example of what is right about the democratic system, not what is wrong with it. There were, to be sure, some unruly and odious excesses. But such indiscretions are a worthwhile price to pay for a precious freedom that more than percent of the world's citizens lack,

1910: Streetcar Horses to Be Retired NEW YORK - Horses are to disappear from the street railroads of New York City. Old fairy tale? Yes, but it's really-truly this time. It is hoped that the final labored trundle of the old gee-gee on the Third Avenue system will take place on September 30. Electric storage battery cars will replace the old ones. They will cost $5,000 apiece. In experiments begun last November gasoline-driven cars were tried, but they cost $8,500 apiece, and it was decided that their operating cost was higher than that of electric cars. The new cars will go on the Avenue B-Canal Street and St. Nicholas Avenue-110th Street lines. They will not be furiously speedy, but their average pace of six and a half miles an hour will be double the present rate and may seem almost dangerous to old

1935: Dreyins Dies in Paris at 75 PARIS - Colonel Alfred Dreyfus, central figure of the treason case which caused a great political upheaval thirty-five years ago, died in Paris [on July 12] at the age of 75. He was in poor health. In April 1894, the "bordereau," a list of French military documents, was discovered in a waste-basket at the German Embassy in Paris. Dreyfus was accused, convicted of delivering secret documents to a foreign power and sentenced to Devil's Island. But it was Ferdinand-Walsin Esterhazy, according to facts since come to light, who laid the plot. He is believed to have wanted to demoralize the French army. In June 1899, Dreyfus was brought back from Devil's Island, again convicted but later pardoned. In July 1906, the Cassation Court reversed the conviction. Evidence indicates that he was an innocent victim.

he wasn't ready to draw. "You can't just start shooting without having someone in your gunsights," he cau-tioned. The problem was "to know

No longer was there anything dif-fuse about the threat of terrorism. No longer was there any question about who was "perpetrating these deeds." Still less was there any

"variety" among terrorist groups or any difficulty in establishing the ties that bind what Mr. Reagan called a "confederation of terrorist states" — Iran, Libya, North Ko-rea, Cuba and Nicaragua.

Mr. Reagan professed not even to know the "sources" of terrorism three weeks ago, or "what they were trying to do." On Monday the "goals and objectives" of this new "international version of Murder.

Incorporated" were all the same.

As one, they share a "simple criminal phenomenon — their fa-natical hatred of the United States, our people, our way of life, our international stature." And their objective — whether their dirty work is done in Burma, Spain, West Germany, France, Italy, Kuwait, Central America or Beirut — is aimed in almost every instance at the worldwide interests of America.

At his press conference a little

WASHINGTON — A recent headline in The Washington Post asked, "What Happened to Reagan the Gunslinger." The short role he had just played as president answer is that he got elected president. Fiction, which is all the gunslinging role was, gave way to fact; campaign image yielded to reality. In the thick of the recent hostage crisis, the president of the United States worked out his frustrations by pounding "a few walls."

That is par for most presidents. The solutions to the world's prob-lems look a lot simpler on the hust-ings than they do on the job. But one of the most important ways in which Ronald Reagan is distinctively different from most presidents is that his adjustment to the realities of office lasts only as long as the challenge at hand. Just when you think you are beginning to see a new, eyes-wide-open Reagan, the old role-playing Reagan is back.

President Reagan's extraordinary address to the American Bar Association last Monday was a perfect case in point — yet another of the familiar flashbacks that have consistently made it difficult for adsistently made it difficult for adversaries as well as allies to find coherence and credibility in his conduct of foreign policy.

It was the old, pre-presidential

Sounding Off Doesn't Hurt Terrorism

PARIS — President Reagan's di-atribe against "a confederation of terrorist states" that he said were engaged in "acts of war against the government and people of the Unit-ed States" may have relieved his pent-up emotions, but it stained his tatesmanlike management of the Beirut hostage crisis.

His speech on Monday before the American Bar Association did just what he warried should not be done. It served to magnify terrorists into rusaders for a world cause, giants instead of gnats stinging solid nations peevishly and ineffectually.

"Freedom itself is the issue," President Reagan said. The attacks "form a pattern of terrorism that has strategic implications and political goals." He blamed "totalitarian states" and a "confederation of states" and a "confederation of criminal governments." And "all of these states are united by one simole, criminal phenomenon — their fanatical hatred of the United States, our people, our way of life, our international stature."

This is intoxicating stuff for hiackers, supporters and would-be imitators — and a far greater re-ward than the release of prisoners detained in Israel who were to be sent home anyway. It must surprise America's adversaries that driving a superpower into frenzy can be so easy, as it puzzles and worries friends who do not consider opposition to U.S. policies necessarily "criminal" or "fanatical."

Mr. Reagan listed Iran, Libya, Cuba. Nicaragua and North Korea. pointedly omitting Syria, which has indeed harbored and aided terrorists but which helped resolve the Beirut incident and is being asked to help free remaining hostages. Such a broadside can encourage foes by defining a cheap, relatively safe way to mobilize anti-American urges, rather than constraining them to recognize their own interest in suppressing terrorism so as to keep the advantages of membership in the international community.

Above all, such talk impedes any real chance of coming to grips with the specific problem. It does not clarify anything, as Mr. Reagan claimed. Instead it politicizes the issue, befuddles people and drives them to ever wilder notions of what can and should be done. Letters from readers show sharp division of opinion, with both sides equally unrealistic. Some, in-flamed and bloodthirsty in rhetoric if not in intent, demand: "Wipe terrorism out, once and for all." Some, provoked and empathetic with all malcontents, rail against the "hypocrisy" of denouncing terror-ism when the country doing the denouncing mines Nicaraguan har-bors, lobs 2,700-pound shells on Lebanon from the battleship New Jersey and supplies states around the world with the engines of war. As if a few bombs would rid the world of suicidal maniacs, or even pinpoint them. As if "understanding," "willingness to listen" and restraint in using force would end conflict and relieve all grievances.

These all-or-nothing attitudes are two sides of the same false coin, intensified by an understanding. intensified by an understandable but unthinking response to frustra-tion. Indulging the yen for the im-possible only heightens the feeling of impotence, when the task of lead-ership should be to find effective action and explain it.

Curing international ills is not easy but it is possible, if the subject is well defined and the measures are appropriate. Mr. Reagan gave the example of piracy on the high seas - not totally eradicated, as namese boat people can testify, but removed as a general menace.

In another field, wiping out the ancient scourges of plague and smallpox was an example of fruitful international cooperation. The striking successes of the World Health Organization are too often overlooked when the United Nations system is attacked for failures.

Ending piracy did not end war or other forms of international vio-ience. Preventing plague and small-pox did not prevent all disease. But those were good campaigns that spared lives and made the world safer in a useful way. Targeting terrorism could bring results, too, but of nations in the pursuit of common criminals, removing the political impact of the deed and reinforcing the will of the chary to cooperate, Mr. Reagan's response has been a big bark. This risks stoking the furies of American impatience and scaring away allies and friends whose help is critical. It is unlikely to scare terrorists; it enhances them. Mr. Reagan has rightly said that indiscriminate retaliation would be a form of terrorism, too. His nation-al security adviser, Robert McFar-lane, said, "Revenge is not a pol-icy." Neither is sounding off.

The New York Times.

The President Has A List of His Own

WASHINGTON — President Reagan flouted the State Department with his personal list of the top five terrorist nations — Iran, Libya, North Korea, Cuba and Nic-aragua. State's official list omits Nicaragua and North Korea but includes Syria and South Yemen.

Mr. Reagan asserted that Nicaragua now plays host to Italy's Red Brigades, West Germany's Baader-TETTOTISTS. the Palestine Liberation Organization, the Irish Republican Army and Uruguay's Tupamaros. One wonders why this international allstar terrorist cast is whiling away its time in Managua, but that should make Europe safer this summer.

Asked about the omission of Syria and South Yemen, a White House spokesman said that there is "no definite connection" between the president's list and the official list. I suspect that there is even less of a connection between the president's speech and doing something specific to counter terrorism.

Stalemated In Poland

By Chalmers M. Roberts

Gorbachev

W ASHINGTON — Poland represents rebellion — yesterday open rebellion, today sullen rebellion. Solidarity, the amazing labor movement, is pretty well smashed, with some of the reforms it advocated being carried out by the new official trade unions. But the spirit behind Solidarity is very much alive.

The Roman Catholic Church, with which Solidarity is entwined, seems both more powerful and more defiant than ever. Today's Communist re-gime in Warsaw is a military junta, but it has less control over the population than that exercised by many a junta in the Third World.

The church used to worry about "captive minds" among the young but no longer. Now, says a former Solidarity activist who reflects the views of Cardinal Josef Glemp, the problem is what to tell the public about the future, because people have no sense of having any influence on things beyond their private sphere.

Despair has brought an increase in alcoholism and, most recently, in drug addiction to a substance made from local poppies. Church sources estimate that already some 50,000 young people have been "lost" to such drugs, with another 200,000 to 300,000 also using them. The economy is described by many as in ruins. Corruption is rampant.

The American dollar bill is openly a key currency on the streets of War-saw and other cities. Cab drivers accept dollars willingly, and waiters in the official tourist hotels openly suggest that you pay your bill in dollars, not ziotys, a transaction by which they make a fine profit. The official rate when we were there was around 134 zlotys to the dollar, but the street rate varied from 500 to 800 or more. The government condones all this, seemingly helpless to fight it; besides, the bills help meet Poland's desperate need for hard currency. These black marketeers, we heard, use their big profits to buy such scarce items as autos or apartments for their chil-dren, the latter costing as much as a million zlotys. Traffic cops have a reputation for taking payoffs on the spot for minor infractions.

But all this pales in significance next to the dynamism, vibrancy and influence of the church. Pope John Paul II may seem conservative, but to the Russians he is a radical threat, while in his native Poland he is the supreme symbol of hope.

To go on a Sunday morning to Mass at St. John's Cathedral in War-saw is to sense this. To stand outside in the jammed street, listening to the service in Polish over loudspeakers, is unforgettable. To see a few blocks away the waiting militia, their water-cannon vehicles and paddy wagons at the ready, adds to the tension.

To know that the priest this day is using the 50th anniversary of the death of Marshal Josef Pilsudski, the Polish patriot who fought both the czar's troops and the Red Army, as a vehicle for a sermon on patriotism is to realize how effectively religion car be used for political purposes.

To hear the Mass end with the solemn singing of the ancient verses of "God, give us back our homeland as every man, woman and child thrusts forward the fingers of their right hands in the V for victory sign is a spine-tingling experience.

Then to cross the city to a crowded Mass at the modest church of Father Jerzy Popieluszko, the young priest murdered by security agents and whose grave in his churchyard has become a hallowed shrine, is to feel again the resistance, the Polish deli-ance of the Soviet will. From the train windows all across Poland, from the East German border to the Soviet border, you see a nearly continuous panorama of small privately owned farms. The farmer holds the plow, the wife handles the reins of the family horse and children walk behind dropping seed after seed. There are few tractors for these farmers, and more for the small amount of acreage that is collective ized. But the private land, like the church, is fiercely defended, and efforts to change the system, so often urged by Moscow, get nowhere. Wojciech Jaruzelski is locked in a young son. I feel comfortable here, and I have never been made to feel uneasy because I am Japanese - until these last few months.

Catch-22 situation with the Russians, the church and the public.

Diplomats say he sees himself as a Polish gentleman and a patriot. At this spring's Warsaw Pact meeting in his capital, which brought Mikhail Gorbachev there for the first time as head man, the ramrod-straight gener al insisted on a one-on-one meeting rather than, as the Russians were said to have suggested, a Gorbachev meet-ing with the entire Polish Politburo. To show that he got his way, General Januzelski later announced that he had "reported" to the Politburo on his talk with Mr. Gorbachev.

Stalemate perhaps best describes the current state of Soviet-Polish relations. Changing that certainly will be one of Mr. Gorbachev's toughest tasks, should he decide to try.

Every Japanese history student learns about American public hysteria in the 1920s and '30s over was called the "yellow peril." Many more of us know about the passionate hatred of "the Japs" that swept America after Pearl Harbor. But those things happened before I was born. Until recently, to me they had always belonged to the history books.

Most of the Americans I have met have been kindhearted and have showed me no hostility. Even when people on Capitol Hill started referring to the possibility of a "trade war" earlier this year, I refused to believe that they really meant it until I saw a quote attributed to a White House staffer in The Washington Post on April 7. After Tokyo's announcement of a 25-percent increase in its "voluntary" quotas on auto exports to the United States, the official told a group of congressmen and business people, according to the article, that he thought, "The next time B-52s Ily over Tokyo, we better make sure they carry bombs."

I realized then that long-repressed resentment had remained in the sary of the end of the war. I was to get in touch with American families whose fathers, husbands or sons were killed in the Pacific theater.

Some were pilots shot down by Zeros; others were sailors who went down aboard ships sunk by Japanese torpedoes, gunfire or kamikaze pi-lots. A number had been captured and had perished in Japanese prison camps from exhaustion or starvation. When I try to imagine the pain and sorrow those mothers and wives have lived with for 40 years, I can almost understand their resentment against everything Japanese. Still, it came as a shock when on several occasions, as I tried to explain the television project on the phone, the person on the other end hung up the instant I pronounced the word "Japanese." Some of the families softened a bit relationship today thinks that the ties are anywhere near as fragile as they were in the years that led up to Pearl Harbor. But it is disturbing to reflect on how quickly the post-World War I friendship between the two countries turned sour in the 1930s. What worries me, as much as the American expressions of irritation and hostility toward Japan, is a feeling of persecution and even paranoia that seems to be developing in Japan, especially among younger people.

By the time these Japanese reached the age of reason, the country was well on its way to becoming a world economic power. They see economic success largely as a result of hard work and sacrifice by their fathers and themselves. They resent being blamed for the big U.S. trade deficit with Japan. In their eyes it derives from America's mismanagement of its own economy — including a very poor overseas marketing effort. Their attitudes are a far cry from the feelings of the current generation of Japanese leaders, most of whom remember all too well the struggle and sacrifice it took to recover from devastation. At a particularly thorny moment of trade dispute a few years ago, Masumi Esaki, the chairman of the governing Liberal Democratic Party's external trade forum, told me frankly that he thought Japan ought to accommodate American demands for opening of the Japanese market as a debt of honor, if nothing else. "We must not forget the generous help that the U.S. provided us during our difficult years after the war," he said. "Now it's our turn to help the U.S." In just a few years the Esakis of people by my country. And it has Japan will be replaced by more self-confident, and sometimes more arrogant, Japanese who have no memory of their country's obligations to America. I hope that their reaction to what they perceive as unreasonable U.S. pressure for trade concessions will not take the country on a dangerous course. I recall a remark a few years ago by a senior Japanese official to an American correspondent in Tokyo: "If you keep pressing too much, we can always switch sides." I am still optimistic about the fu-ture. Many of the families of men killed in the Pacific showed no reservations about discussing the war on Japanese television. Some veterans of the battle of Leyte Gulf, one of the bitterest in the Pacific, went out of their way to help me with the project. Even more encouraging is that for younger generations of Americans, Pearl Harbor is ancient history. They see the Japanese as competitors, not as enemies. I was relieved, and grateful, to hear a U.S. Marine colonel, whose father never returned from the air battle over Guadalcanal in 1942, say, "Hatred only destroys the person who carries it, not the target of his hatred." I hope this will be the spirit of America's relationship with Japan.

Greeks Managed Alone Regarding "Some Ways for America to Fight Back" (July 5):

Mr. Safire's opinion column contains biting criticism of the Greek government. The proper reply to this is that Greece and its government are not afraid to "go it alone," as the writer suggests they should be made to do. As a matter of fact we did go it alone, both in 1940 against fascism and in 1941 against Nazism and racism. We were not intimidated by the Jews during the German occupation.

Mr. Salire is ill-advised to try to blackmail us with the threat of economic warfare. Greece knows a good deal about fighting alone for freedom and democracy. MICHAEL J. PALAIOCOSTAS.

- Southeast Asian diplomats ex-pressed satisfaction Friday after their peace proposal for Cambodia was formally approved by the United States.

But the main target of the plan, Vietnam, issued a strongly negative

The U.S. secretary of state, George P. Shultz, informed the foreign ministers of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations on Friday that Washington would endorse their proposal for indirect talks.

The plan calls for talks, through a mediator, between three Cambodian guerrilla factions, one of which is Communist, on the one hand, and Vietnam and the Vietnamese-installed Cambodian government, on the other.

ASEAN, which includes Malaysia, Thailand, Singapore, Indone-sia, Brunei and the Philippines, did not formally respond to Mr. Shultz's announcement. However, several Asian diplomats said they took satisfaction from the U.S. backing, especially because Mr. Shuitz had earlier criticized the proposal.

The Malaysian foreign minister, Tengku Ahmad Rithauddeen, raised bopes that the proposal might bring about early negotia-tions over Cambodia by revealing that the Vietnamese ambassador here, Nguyen Can, had called at the Foreign Ministry late Thursday to ask for details of the proposal.

Mr. Rithauddeen quoted the Vietnamese envoy as saying that Hanoi had not rejected the propos-al despite its harsh attacks in public

The Vietnamese Embassy, however, issued a statement here Friday with a quite different version. The embassy said that Mr. Can had gone to the Malaysian to ask for an explanation of why ASEAN had formally endorsed a proposal that was "already rejected" by Vietnam. A senior U.S. official expressed doubt that Hanoi would accept the proposal but said this did not negate its validity. "Every sign is that Vietnam is pressing a military solution, not a political settlement," the official said. He added: "Just because the Vietnamese turn it down this year Victnamese turn it down this year doesn't mean they'll continue to turn it down next year."

Vietnam has been critical of the ASEAN proposal in part because it would give a negotiating role to the Communist Khmer Rogue guerril-la forces headed by Poi Pot. A Japanese diplomat who recently visited Hanoi quoted the Vietnamese foreign minister, Nguyen Co Thach, as saying that the talks pro-posed by ASEAN were "completely out of the question."

In amnouncing U.S. support for the ASEAN proposal, Mr. Shultz said the United States would not remove its economic and diplomatic pressures against Vietnam until negotiations achieved regionally acceptable results.

Sunday, July 21, in the Auvergne countryside near Clermont-Ferrand, France.

In 1900, James Gordon Bennett, Jr., founder of the International Herald Tribune, created the first International Automobile Cup. The winner averaged 38.4 mph (61.9 kph) — despite a collision with a large Saint Bernard.

On Sunday, July 21, 1985, sixty cars built between 1903 and 1945 will participate in a Gordon Bennett Memorial Rally commemorating the 80th anniversary of the last Gordon Bennett Automobile Cup, held in 1905 in the Auvergne countryside near Clermont-Ferrand, France.

Participating cars from seven countries will drive the same 137 km route designated by the Michelin brothers for the 1905 race. Departure will be at 8 a.m.

from the Plaine de Laschamp, 14 km west of Clermont-Ferrand, on route 941A.

Regularity trials will start at 3 p.m. at the Circuit de Charade, a 4 km mountain racecourse just west of Clermont-Ferrand where several French Grand Prix have been held.

An exhibition on the 1905 Gordon Bennett Race will be open from July 15 to 25 at the Maison des Congrès in Germont-Ferrand.

All events are organized by the Automobile Club d'Auvergne and will be free to the public. For additional information contact the International Herald Tribune in Paris, tel. 747 12 65, ext. 4566.

The portrait must have been completed shortly after, for its mezzotint engraving by C. Townley is dated 1772. Sotheby's expert, James Miller, gave it an estimate of £10,000 to £15,000. It was knocked down at £14,000 to the Science Museum of London.

He also did dogs, such as the work in Sotheby's sale, two animals standing out against the back-ground of a wooded landscape. Signed in full, dated 1736, the large

It had hung at Althorp has not caught up with the other since 1746 and did not leave the Spencer family until its transfer to Sotheby's paintings department

Like all paintings that have virtually never been moved since they were executed, this has intact a subtlety in the color balance, with its original stumati under the light varnish of early times, that seems miraculous. The painting made glamorous by its provenance and historical documentation — the duchess refers to the dogs in her length facing the viewer. The piercing look, only slightly toned down by a smile suggestive of by a smile suggestive of good ther. There is an air of knowing expectation about the two animals and a sense of mystery about the

The picture was knocked down at £143,000, within the expected bracket yet far below the price of a major painting of comparable im-portance from 17th-century Netherlands or 18th-century France. Turning away from such major landmarks, there were other desirable pieces with the same glamor-ous and historic provenance — the collection of the Spencer family at Althorp. Thursday, for gold. True, the object was unique: The gold baptismal font, carrying the mark of the cele-brated Paul Storr dating it to 1797-1798, is surrounded by an aura of mystery, though it had never left the Portland family until its sale at Christie's by Lady Anne Cavendish-Bentinck, daughter of the sev-enth Duke of Portland. It was com-missioned for the christening of William Henry Cavendish Caven-dish-Stock-Bentinck, grandson of the third duke. The very idea of a font made of solid gold rather than silver or silver gilt is extraordinary. Charles Truman, who wrote the text for the hardbound, one-item catalog printed by Christie's, quotes the remark of E. Alfred Jones that "what is doubtless the

anction that he had falsely reported the number of paintings sold. David Bathurst, president of the New York branch of Christie's at the time of the auction, said Floyd took no action in the matter. The deposition came to light

Thursday when attorneys for the owner of the paintings, who had sued Christie's, called attention to it in response to a statement Wednesday by Floyd saying Bath-urst took "full responsibility" for the false report. Christie's said Thursday that it would have no immediate comment on the deposition.

Shortly after the 1981 auction. Bathurst announced that three Impressionist paintings had been sold for a total of $5.6 million, while in fact one painting had been sold for $2.2 million and the others did not attract large enough bids.

In sworn statements made as part of the suit, brought against Christie's in 1982, Bathurst, now chairman of Christie's London and New York operations, said he had told Floyd about the results of the auction shortly after the sale. He was answering questions from Robert Weiner, an attorney for Di-mitry Jodidio, the consignor of the Impressionist paintings — eight in all — offered for auction in 1981.

In another part of his deposition, Bathurst indicated that shortly af-ter the auction he also spoke about the false reports to Christopher Burge, then a senior vice president and director of the fine arts department of Christie's and now the president of Christie's New York. Last Wednesday, Jodidio's suit was dismissed in New York State dence in an effort to have the case

Doubt Cast on Attribution Of 'Helmet' to Rembrandt

BERLIN — One of West Berlin's most famous paintings. "The Man with the Golden Helmer," long attributed to Rembrandt, may have been painted by an unknown artist, according to an art

Reinald Grosshans, spokesman for the Prussian Institute of Cultural Property, said Thursday that Jan Kelch, an expert on Dutch painting, had examined the signature on the work and found convincng evidence "voiding further attribution of the painting to Rembrandt." More tests were being conducted, he said. Grosshans said the initial tests indicated that the painting, which is in the Dahlem Museums, was the work of an unknown artist from about 1650. Experts are also examining other paintings thought to be by Rembrandt, he said. The Dutch master lived from 1606 to 1669. The painting is being restored and the results of the tests will probably not be released before the autumn, Grosshans said. "It is too arly to lay all the cards on the table." he said. Doubts about the origin of "The Man with the Golden Helmet" were voiced last spring by a Dutch curators' commission.

Kasdan's 'Silverado' Is a Tribute to Westerns

By Janet Maslin New York Times Service

N EW YORK — "Silverado" is a sweeping, glorious-looking western that's at least a full genera-tion removed from the classic films it brings to mind. Lawrence Kas-dan, who produced, directed and co-wrote the film, doesn't seem to be commenting ironically on the western form. Nor is he determined western form. Nor is he determined western form approaches. "Silverado" has four heroes, and to update it. He simply approaches it from a present-day standpoint, Less well used, through no evident fault of their own, are John Cleese as another sheriff and Jeff Goldblum as a traveling gambler. And Rosanna Arquette, who puts in a brief and uncomfortable ap-pearance, has the hopeless job of answering a compliment with a stern "After a while, I won't be so pretty. But this land will be." There is a difference of opinion in the recorded book industry over whether to get famous actors to read. Some publishers try to get well-known actors for dramatic readings while others prefer more straightforward readings by unknown actors.

Since 1978, the percentage of Americans reading books has declined 5 percent, according to a study released last month by the Book Industry Study Group, a nonprofit organization in Manhat-tan. While librarians and literacy experts do not blame recorded books for the drop, they have mixed feelings about the effect of tapes in the future.

"Tapes are one more disincentive to literacy," said Kozol, "In the case of serious works of art, there is something precious about the si-lence that surrounds reading. unchanged.

Transportation issues continued to post good gains after Mexico's announcement late Wednesday that it is cutting its oil prices. Analysts said the broader market drew support from the view that lower oil prices and a weaker U.S. dollar would help produce better corporate earnings in the second half of the year.

On the other hand, a larger-than-expected $4-billion rise in the nation's basic money supply reported by the Federal Reserve on Thursday after the market closed has made some investors conclude that the Fed will be in no hurry to push interest rates lower.

"The market is up but not dramatically, ex-cept in the transportation sector," noted Hildegard Zagorski of Prudential-Bache. "It seems to be regrouping," she said. "We make new highs everyday and yet no one is jumping up and

Ms. Zagorski said one reason for the "very quiet bull market" is that the technology stocks "Just are not doing too well. Investors won't get enthusiastic until they see a 3- or 4-point rise in IBM, Digital Equipment and Texas Instru-ments," she said.

"Investors are taking time to reevaluate the situation," said Peter Furniss of Drexel Burnham Lambert

"The decline in retail sales shows we still have faltering economy and the $4-billion rise in M-1 eliminates the need for the Fed to pump more money into the banking system to push interest rates down," he said. "As a result, any discount rate cut will come later rather than

while the falling dollar will aid companies with large overseas operations and markets, such a trend would also have an inflationary potential, Mr. Furniss noted. One reason domestic inflation has stayed low is that Americans have been able to buy imported goods relatively cheaply. To compete with the imported goods, American producers have also had to keep prices for their producers relatively low. City Investing Co. was the most active NYSE-listed issue, down ½ to 36%. Stockman's Hasty Exit Indicates Political Rift

By LEONARD SILK

New York Times Service EW YORK — David A. Stockman's departure from the Office of Management and Budget comes at a time when the White House, the Republican-led Senate and the Democratic-led House of Representatives are still struggling to put together a budget for the fiscal year 1986. Was this the right time for the acknowledged master of budget detail to leave the government for a job on Wall Street? Did he jump or

The official answer from Mr. Stockman's office is that he had made clear before the 1984 election that he intended to leave before the next budget cycle began. That happens in September,

Mr. Stockman felt conscience in some official tasks.

when the budget office sub-mits its guidelines for the fis-cal year 1987 budget to the departments and agencies, which then go back and forth with the president and the budget office over their programs and spending figures well into December.

was he pushed?

The administration's budget is then put to bed over the Christmas vacation and published shortly after the start of the new year. But, with the administration and Congress in the throes of carpentering a framework for the 1986 budget, there was no obviously urgent reason for Mr. Stockman to pack his bags by the end of July.

OR WAS there urgency on the side of his new employer, Salomon Brothers, the investment bankers. Henry Kanfman, a Salomon Brothers' director and its chief economist, said in an interview this week that Mr. Stockman would be mist, said in an interview this week that Mr. Stockman would be "helpful in two areas — corporation and government finance."

He described the budget director as a "quick and disciplined learner and an intensive worker" who was very good on details.

Mr. Kaufman said Mr. Stockman, who has not had previous experience in investment banking, would be expected to spend a while familiarizing himself with Salomon Brothers, and, he was confident, "would soon get to know our routines." In any case, Mr. Stockman is not rushing to start his new work.

The White House said he would take three months off to write a book about his experience in the administration.

But there are two factors in his recent White House experience that may explain Mr. Stockman's early departure: One was the flap about his speech before the board of the New York Stock Exchange, in which Mr. Stockman declared, among other things. that "we have increasingly resorted to squaring the circle with accounting gimmicks, evasions, half-truths and downright dishonesty in our budget numbers, debate and advocacy."

This was not the first time that he had given semi-public voice to his disquiet about the budget process and the administration's fiscal policy: He said after a report in The Atlantic of December, 1981 that he thought he would not be quoted until after he left office. The president simply took him "to the woodshed" over his

That no new budget director was in place to take Mr. Stock-man's place further suggests that his departure was a hasty one, despite the president's warm words of appreciation.

Indeed, the second factor that may explain Mr. Stockman's hasty departure is the presence in the White House of a different chief of staff, Donald T. Regan, a tough disciplinarian who is taking hold of the budget negotiations for the president and does not appreciate rivalrous and public or semi-public voices coming from within the administration.

Edwin L. Dale Jr., the spokesman for the budget office, when asked who the new budget director was likely to be, replied that he did not know but said, "Don Regan will constitute a search committee of one" and would want "someone who will keep a lower profile than Dave Stockman."

Mr. Stockman's departure represents a key change in the character of the Reagan administration. "An era has ended," (Continued on Page 13, Col. 3)

MBB Sets Sights on Krauss

Leads Bidders For Tank Maker

By Warren Getler

International Herald Tribune
FRANKFURT — West Germamy's antitrust office is expected to approve next week a takeover of Kranss-Maffet AG, the nation's kranss-mailed AC, the nation's leading tank maker, by a consortium led by Messerschmitt-Bölkow-Blohm GmbH, government sources said Friday.

Messerschmitt, which is based in Munich, is West Germany's leading aerospace concern and one of its largest defense contractors.

The price of the consortium's reconcerd prophase which involves proposed purchase, which involves an 81-percent stake in Kranss-Marfei, is estimated at just under 150 million DM ($50.8 million), industry sources said. A 15-percent stake would remain with the current owners, the Friedrich Flick Industrieverwaltung KGaA, while some 4 percent would be retained by other shareholders.

Approval of the takeover would follow a series of bids by groups involving MBB that failed to win approval from the Federal Cartel Office, the antitrust unit industry sources said a takeover by MBB would significantly in-crease the competitiveness of West German arms makers in winning defense contracts.

Krauss-Maffei, which is also based in Munich, posted 1984 group sales of 1.9 billion Deutsche marks, with some 1.5 billion DM related to defense. It transferred a profit of 4.4 million DM to its parent company, the Flick group, in 1984, down 37 percent from 7 mil-lion DM in 1983. In addition to uon DM in 1783. In addition to tanks, the group produces locomotives, traffic systems and plastic-processing machinery.

MBB had 1984 sales of 5.7 billion DM, over half of which were from sales of military products, including guided missiles, the Tornado, jet, program and belivrouses. do jet program and belicopters. MBB's 1983 profits were 91.7 million DM. Profit figures for last year are due later this month.

Earlier this month, Cartel Office officials said they viewed the takeofficials said they viewed the take-over bid lodged May 9 by MBB, Diehl GMBH of Nurenberg and a group of leading banks "more posi-tively than negatively." Diehl, an-other arms maker, had 1984 sales of about 1,8 billion DM. On Friday, a well-placed government source said the cartel office's assessment "had not changed."

The antitrust unit had rejected previous takeover efforts by MBB, beginning more than a year ago, on the grounds that MBB could exercise management control over the company and thereby create a kind of arms giant with near-monopoly power.

In an effort to win approval, MBB has since then sought to keep (Continued on Page 13, Col. 8)

Dollar Plunges In New York

United Press International NEW YORK - The dollar immmeted to its lowest level in almost a year Friday in a selling wave sparked by an 0.8-percent

Bank Succeeds By Looking to Other Markets

By Fred R. Bleakley
New York Times Service
NEW YORK — Running the world's largest commercial bank has never stopped Citicorp executives from dreaming of other profitable frontiers to conquer. Despite federal laws prohibiting commercial banks from underwriting corporate securities, the bank has tried for years to become an investment banking powerhouse. Now, after a sputupon the right strategy.

Instead of primarily compet-ing with the established merger kings of Wall Street or the deep-pocketed merchant bankers in the giant Euroboad market, Citicorp is seeking its biggest growth from countries whose financial markets are growing quickly or are being radically restructured, such as Britain, Japan, Australia

Citicorp underwrites stocks and bonds, trades government

The company's selective approach has proved lucrative, although it does not always bring it the same recognition as handling $10-billion mergers. Its annual return on investment has been more than 30 percent for the last two years, the highest for any activity in the bank, according to analysis. And the investment bank's $160 million earnings last year accounted for about 20 per-cent of Citicorp's $890 million net income. Paul J. Collins, the 48-year-old

Penney Co. against 2.8 percent in the same 1984 period. In all of last year, wholesale prices were up 1.8 percent.

The Commerce Department, meanwhile, reported that sales by the nation's retailers - a report covering a broad range of merchants from gas stations to restaurants — fell 0.8 percent last month, the steepest slide in 11 months.

Those figures were in line with industry reports Thursday of weak merchandise sales last month for U.S. retailers, reflecting sluggish consumer demand and unseasonably cool weather.

Analysts said Thursday that Mexico's decision to cut oil prices has pushed the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries another step closer to reducing its official oil prices for the second time this year and would put downward pressure on prices of petroleum products. Meanwhile, the stock market used a moderate gain to reach re-cord highs Thursday. The Dow Jones average rose 4.81 to an all-time high of 1,337.70, surpassing the peak of 1,337.14 it reached July I. (Details, Page 8). Jeffrey Edelman, a retail analyst with Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., said that a year ago stores had heavy inventories and were cutting prices aggressively to move mer-chandise, which helped bolster sales. But this year, "with inven-tories more aligned with sales, they are not promoting as aggressively, he said Sears's chairman, Edward Tell-ing, said cooler weather in many states in June adversely affected sales of air conditioning and other weather-related merchandise. The relatively low temperatures also discouraged consumers from buying summer apparel.

Mexico's decision to cut oil prices indicated it does not expect that OPEC will be able to bolster prices at its next meeting, sched-uled for July 22, said Paul Mlotok, an analyst at Salomon Brothers

The Mexican oil monopoly, Pe-mex, said Wednesday it cut the price of its light Isthmus grade of oil by an average of $1.24 a barrel. The former price was $27.75 a barrei. It said the price of heavy Maya crude, which was cut $1.50 a barrel last month, was lowered again, by an average 77 cents a barrel. The previous price was $24 a barrel.

Mexico's action, following earli-er cuts by Britain, Norway and the Soviet Union, shows the "market is pulling prices down and OPEC has been ineffective in stopping the erosion," said Lawrence Goldstein, executive vice president of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation, a New York study group.

Johnson Matthey Reports 45% Decline in Pretax Profit

LONDON — Johnson Matthey PLC reported Friday that pretax profit for the year ended March 31, including discontinued operations, tell 45 percent to £20.1 million ($25.1 million) from £36.6 million in the previous year. Extraordinary losses climbed to £176.3 million from £26.1 million. The group said operating profits in the year dropped 5 percent to £45.3 million from £47.7 million a

Progress since the disposal of Johnson Matthey Bankers Ltd. to the Bank of England last October is continuing in the current financial year, the company said. New financing arrangements will enable it to progress from a secure base. But some problem areas remain, particularly in precious metal refining and the North American jewelry business, Further reorganization may be necessary, but the board believes the group has turned around from the past and is well placed to main-tain its position in the forefront of precious-metals technology. The group's present financing requirements are mainly provided under the interim refinancing agreement, including an institu-tional standby facility of £250 mil-

All drawings from the facility were repaid by March 31 and no funds have been drawn since then,

Discussions with the group's bankers are at an advanced stage and new medium-term facilities will soon be in place. The interim refinancing agreement is due to ex-pire on July 30. Substantially re-duced facilities will suffice in view of the company's improved position, Johnson Matthey said.

Net tangible assets at March 31 were £205 million, excluding £46 million for the excess of metal stocks at market value compared

Johnson Matthey said agreement has been reached in principle, sub-ject to the banking talks being finalized, for a private placement with institutions of £25 million of floating rate medium-term subor-

The warrants will be exercisable over five years into five million Johnson Matthey ordinary shares at prices ranging from 110 pence to 120 pence a share.

Closes, Cites Loss

SINGAPORE — The Singapore Monitor, Singapore's only afternoon English-language newspaper, said Friday it would cease publication by July 14 because of heavy losses.

The newspaper's chairman, Chua Kim Yeow, told staff the closure did not stem from last year's merger of major newspapers in Singapore.

The Monitor's parent company, the Singapore News and Publications Ltd. merged with the Straits Times Group late last year in a government-backed move. Mr. Yeow said the Monitor had exhausted its capital of 20 million Singapore dollars ($9 million) and owed

Britoil Reports 29% Increase in Pretax Profits

LONDON — Britoil PLC said Friday its pretax profit rose 29 per-cent to £364.7 million ($503 million) in the first half of 1985 from £280 million in the same period a year earlier.

It said net profit was up 44 per-cent in the half, at £91.4 million compared to £63.4 million. A spokesman said the company planned a final dividend of 9 pence.

Britoil said first-half crude oil production totaled 32 million barrels, up from 29 million in 1984. Meanwhile, the company announced that current shareholders, as well as employees, would be given special allocations on the basis of one share for each five held in the government's sale of its 48.8-percent stake in the concern. Congressman Accuses Hutton Of Withholding Documents

By Nathaniel C. Nash New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - The chairman of the House subcommittee that is investigating E.F. Hutton & Co.'s check overdraft scheme has accused the New York brokerage firm of refusing to comply with the subcommittee's subpocna of internai Hutton documents and of possible obstruction of justice.

Representative William J.

Hughes, Democrat of New Jersey, who is head of the Judiciary Committee's Subcommittee on Crime, accused Hutton on Thursday of "attempting to frustrate our inves-tigation," first by refusing to ap-pear before the subcommittee, then by the "indiscriminate dumping" on the subcommittee "of a quarter of a million largely irrelevant docu-day that it had turned over to the dates when we received a subpoecovered documents relating to the firm's overdraft practices. He said Hutton's release of relevant material remains sporadic and incomplete and that the subcommittee had yet to receive many of the documents it had requested.

"Now the tactic seems to be an outward posture of full cooperation, but performance which comes in spits and dribbles which smack of obstruction of justice," Mr.

In a statement, Robert Fomon, Hutton's chairman, said: "We have done everything humanly possible to cooperate with the subcommitchairman's statement contains seri-ous mischaracterizations. We have never suppressed a single docufrustrate any investigation, nor did Mr. Hughes's criticism came de-spite Hutton's disclosure Wednes-ly. We were negotiating appearance

Illustrated, $17.95. Oxford University Press, 200 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10016.

DOROTHY WORDSWORTH worshiped her brother William. "Fraternal affection," she once wrote, "has been the building up of my being, the light of my path!" She was also a writer who deserves to be remembered on her own account. Her journals, published long after her death, have a lasting interest quite apart from their documentary importance. But it is easy enough to see why she has generally been treated as a subordinate figure, a mere satellite in the Romantic constellation.

By Robert Gittings and Jo Manton. 318 pages.

The new biography by Robert Gittings and his wife, Jo Manton, is the first in more than 50 years, and one that rises admirably to the occasion. Both authors are experienced biographers — Gittings is known for his excellent lives of Keats and Thomas Hardy — and their account of Dorothy is lively, thoughtful, soaked in the spirit of its subject without being blind to her limitations. It also has the merit nanages to pack a good deal into a few words.

DENNIS THE MENACE

Witness the summing-up of William and Dorothy's brother Christopher, for instance: "He was a lonely man, who neither invited nor permitted pity."

Dorothy was a year younger than William, the third of the five Wordsworth children and the only developed the property of t daughter. Her mother's death, shortly after her 6th birthday, was an even more severe blow for her than it was for her brothers; she was sent to live with cousins in Yorkshire, a long way away — by the standards of those days — from her home in the Lake District, and her father, who died when she was 12, unaccountably failed to have her back for even the briefest visit. If William's feeling for nature often reads like an attempt to reconstitute a lost bond with his mother, Dorothy's clinging to him can surely be seen in part — Gittings and Manton suggest as much — as an attempt to compensate for her father's neglect.

Not that her childhood was outwardly unhappy. Her cousins were kind, and she did not lack for congenial company — all this part of the story is unfamiliar, and attractively described. But the great resolution of her life, formed when she was 19 and William, then an undergraduate at Cambri came to visit her, was to set up house with him. He was more than a brother; he was "my earliest and my dearest Male Friend." Gittings and Manton will have no truck with the theory that brother and sister were involved in an incestious relationship. They point out that the story was being put about in the Wordsworths' time and that De Quincey, a witness who carries weight (not least because he had his own reasons for (not least because he had his own reasons for resenting their censoriousness in sexual matters), dismissed it as base and baseless gossip.

Much of William and Dorothy's life together was thoroughly prosaic. Dorothy ran the household, and took pride in doing so. Nor did she show any trace of resentment when Wordsworth married; continuing to live under the same roof, she remained on almost preferantically acced terms with his mile and almost preternaturally good terms with his wife, and when children came, she slipped easily into the traditional role of maiden aunt.

But if that were all, her story would hardly be worth recounting at any length. The deepest affini-ties between brother and sister were those of sensibility and imaginative sympathy. Wordsworth himself felt that she was in some ways a finer spirit than he was, and Coleridge paid tribute to her qualities in an eloquent passage: "Her information various— her eye watchful in minutest observation of nature - and her taste a perfect electrometer - it bends. protrudes, and draws in at subtlest beauties and

This might sound excessive if it were not for the This might sound excessive if it were not for the evidence of the journals — the early ones in particular, the ones she kept while living in Alfoxton in Somerset (where her brother and Coleridge put together "Lyrical Ballads") and during her first years in Grasmere. Her writing in them has a singular purity, and a depth of feeling that goes far beyond mere meticulous description; for all her restraint, and her self-effacing domestic role, there is plenty of evidence that Dorothy was prey to nervous agitation, and her absorption in nature served as a form of therapy.

Her later years make less encouraging reading. She became as narrow and conventional in her outlook as William. Then, in her mid-60s, came the outlook as William. Then, in her mid-60s, came the onset of 20 painful years of senility. Gittings and Manton are fairly confident that she had a form of Alzheimer's disease. There is some consolation in the loving care she received from her brother and his

U.S. Women Take Right to Exercise

HARTSDALE, New York (UPI) — Women have become a majority of new participants in running, weight training, physical conditioning and fitness bicycling in the United States, according to a survey.

Some of the findings by American Sports Data Inc.: Three out of five new physical conditioning and weight training participants and seven out of every 10 new fitness bicyclists were women; of the adults who have taken up running or jogging in the past year, 57 percent are female.

The victory brought congratulatory cables from Chancellor Helmut Kohl and President Richard von Weizsäcker and front-page photographs of the grinning, red-haired teen-kissing his trophy. The mayor of Becker's hometown of Lei-men, near Heidelberg, said he had answered telephone calls around the clock from people wanting to know more about the new star. "This is something we needed," said Dieter Klein, 39, a tool and die salesman from Frankfurt, on his way to pick up his 13-year-old son at tennis practice. The D.C. National Bank Tennis Classic in Washington, D.C., amounced Thursday that Becker had withdrawn from that tournament because of an ankle injury. Becker has been vacationing in Monaco, where a doctor told him to stay off his swollen left ankle for 5 to 10 days, said Heary Brehm, director of the tournament.]

Friday, more than 25,000 cheering people gave Becker a hero's welcome in Leimen, population 17,000, as he rode in a motorcade through streets festooned with flowers, flags and welcome-home signs:

players ranked among the world's top 10: Claudia Kohde-Kilsch and Steffi Graf. Graf, 15, has been touted by some experts as a possible successor to Martina Navratilova or Chris Evert Lloyd, who have long

With a population of 60 million, West

three times more than it was 10 years ago.

one of the favorites to win next year's World Cup in Mexico, probably the most cherished trophy in international sports. West Germany won the 1954 and 1974 tournaments. The country also is beginning to make a mark in basketball.

Detlef Schrempf, who played for the University of Washington, and Uwe Blab, who played at Indiana University, recently were taken by the Dallas Mavericks in the National Basketball Association draft.

Manfred Pelzer, a spokesman for the West said German Baskethall Association, said there are at least 50 other German basketball play-ers scattered throughout the United States. He said 15 specifically were sent there to sharpen their game and return home to play on West Germany's national team.

Part of the rise in West Germany's sport status can be traced to the West German Institute for Sports Assistance, which provides financial support to promising ama-

He said it was individual effort and private support from their families that took Becker and Langer to the top.

Coleman, McGee Steal Game

ST. LOUIS - Vince Coleman was on the Busch Stadium video screen between innings Thursday night, saying to the fans: "Please, while you're here at the game, be considerate to your fellow man."

Coleman then proceeded to treat the San Diego Padres and pitcher Mark Thurmond with complete disrespect, stealing three bases and scoring twice in the St. Louis Cardinals' easy, 6-0 victory.

And Coleman, who has a league-leading 62 stolen bases, just began the track meet. After he gets on base, up comes Willie McGee. Since McGee runs a 4.45-second 40-yard (36.5-meter) dash — a little off Coleman's 4.3 pace — he will steal, too. Thursday night, the Willie and Vince tag team was successful on two double steals, which led to four runs, which led to the Padres' third straight loss, which led to pitcher John Tudor's 10th straight victory.

Overall, the Cardinals stole eight bases, their season high, and the Padres committed five errors. The Cardinals never hit the ball very hard. But they would hit it somewhere on the ground, and, with them, that is enough, considering how they almost always beat out the throw. Coleman singled by third baseman Kurt Bevacqua in the first inning, and McGee singled to center. The first heat was on. Immediately, the Cardinals' manager, Whitey Herzog, ordered a double steal. Thurmond, who has a very slow delivery to the plate, was hopeless. So was catcher Terry Kennedy. Kennedy did not even throw the ball, and base runners stood on second and third. Two outs later, Tito Landrum singled for two runs. In the fourth, Coleman burned, Bey it eight feet over Steve Garvey's head, but Coleman had to hold at first since the ball bounced back to Garvey. Coleman stole second, McGee walked on four pitches and the second heat was on.

Again, Herzog ordered a double steal. This time, Kennedy threw to third, where the ball bounced in front of Bevacqua and on into left. Coleman scored. McGee then stole third, uncontested, Jack Clark followed with a base hit and it was 5-0.

Sunton won his sixth straight — when his upper-deck smash went and his 289th in the majors. — just outside the right-field foul

Building Up Flight Miles

WASHINGTON—I see where several airline companies are pon for 5,000 bonus miles. being taken over. Frankly, I don't know why anyone would want to you an American?" she asked. buy an airline nowadays. The way they're handing out free tickets I predict in two years everyone will be flying for nothing anyway.

What happened was that some sales promotion genius thought up the idea of awarding "frequent fly-el. For example, if you earn a credit of 60,000 miles you can fly coach to any destination in the United States; for 100.000 miles you can fly first class. And for 150,000 niles you get to take your entire family, including the dog, any-where in the world.

If the airlines had just stuck to the original idea it would have made some sense. But they started giving out "bonus" miles, not just for flying but for renting a car. staying in a certain hotel or eating a particular kind of pizza 30 days in a

I hadn't realized how easy it was to build up bonus mileage until I went into an airline office on Fifth Avenue in New York last week. I told the lady behind the

A Kibbutznik In the Rockies

By Herbert Mitgang

risms and observations the other day while passing through New York on the way to Colorado. where he has been teaching and absorbing the American scene through the keen vision of a kibbutznik in the Rockies. In carefully chosen, fluent sentences, as if mentally translating from Hebrew into English. he talked about the six years of word-sculpting that went into his new novel, "A Perfect Peace" (a Helen and Kurt Wolff Book-Harcourt Brace Jovanovich). He also discussed writers and students in the Middle East and Middle West, and a surprising personal influence—Sherwood Anderson. "A Perfect Peace," the story of a family living on a kibbutz in the early days of Israel, is concerned with the clash of immigrants and their native-born children. "The crux of the novel," Oz said, "is the marvelous dream of the idealistic pioneers, those old tyrants who wanted to revolutionize the human psyche and the nature of love. Somehow, their dream still hovers in the air." The title derives from a prayer said at graveside. "It's not simply a nostalgic novel about fathers and sons," he said, "but about yearnings." Oz said there was a subtext to

"A Perfect Peace" that he hoped New York Times Series

readers would discern. "I resolved to convey a certain biblical story — about King Saul, Jonathan his son, and David. Saul, the magnetic, fading father. Jonathan, the tragic, rejected son. David, the crazy, poetic adopted stranger. All this secretly feeds the plot of the novel."
"Writing a novel is like reconstructing the Rocky Mountains out of Lego blocks," he said. "It's comparable to a sculptor chiseling away. I see some chamsy heavy rock out there in the mountains, I drag it into my studio and chip away for the next two years. When it is over, I put a magnifying glass to my eye and then, with small pincers, start removing the particles and smoothing it out."

Of novel writing, he said:
"There is no word in Hebrew for fiction — I boycott that word. It means the opposite of truth. Prose, yes, but not fiction. I write prose. I aim at truth, not facts, and I am old enough to know the difference between facts and Oz is old enough to have fought in the Sinai Desert and on the Golan Heights in two wars. He was born in Jerusalem in 1939 and since age 15 has lived and worked on Kibbutz Hulda, taking his turn as a waiter, a teacher or guard. In a separate studio, he writes at a standup desk on a typewriter with Hebrew key-love affair, writing a short story like a long love affair, writing a novel is like a marriage," Oz said. "In a novel you have to make a half-million decisions, from the choice of an adverb to where to place a comma, I can have a pang of self-indulgence over a single comma. I write my drafts in longhand - I need the sensual contact of paper, pen, ink and my fingers. Then I light it out on the typewriter."

Oz said he found an affinity between his writing, which is rooted in Israel no matter where he writes, and that of Central and writer, he said, are his neighbors on the kibbutz. "I know three or four hundred very different people intimately," he said. "I know their secrets. The penalty is that they know a lot more about me than I'd like them to know - but that's only fair. After dinner, I sit down with these successful old revolutionaries who have outlived their revolutions and their success. They tell me their life stories, making me vow that I will not use them and secretly hoping, of course, that I will. I have a neighbor who combs his hair whenever he passes my studio. He tells me that in case I see him and use him as a character, he wants his hair combed."

For the past two semesters, Oz. has taught writing at Colorado College in Colorado Springs. He said he and his wife would return to Israel with warm feelings about the region.

"It's still a little too early for me to write about Colorado," Oz said. "I need to get away from Israel to write about Israel, I need to get away from Colorado to write about Colorado. When I do journalistic writing it's for rage, and nothing outraged me in Colo-rado. Colorado Springs is a beautiful place. I taught a couple of courses in literature and a brief course in politics called 'Israelis and Palestinians.' Steaming Over the Savoy Tuke, put an advertisement in The Times and Financial Times newspapers accusing a rivel tycoon. Lord Forte, had of the Trusthouse Forte group, of publicly denigrating the Savoy group while privately trying to buy control of it on the stock market. The directors accused Lord Forte and his son and chief aide, Rocco Forte, of privately paying more than the market price for Savoy stock while saying in public that the market price was "ndiculously inflated." The advertisement charged that Forte's "campaign against the Savoy" stemmed from a frustrated ambition to control the Savov and other hotels owned by the group; Claridge's, the Berkeley, the Connaught, and the Lancaster Hotel in Paris. Forte, whose London flag-ship hotel is the Grosvenor House in Park Lane, responded. "I just ignore that kind of thing. These people like spending shareholders' money. It is a lot of rubbish." Rocco Forte said it was "quite out-rageous" to suggest that he and his father had "any personal interest in this battle," In 1981 the Savoy directors rejected a Forte takeover bid of £67 million (then about $121 million). That effort gave Forte a large block of Savoy stock, but without voting rights. He now has 70.3 percent of the shares but 40.3 percent of the votes, and is refused board representation by Tuke and the other directors.
